In the event a state-chartered financial institution suffers the whole or partial loss of its main office or branch due to a hurricane or other natural disaster, it is unnecessary to seek the prior approval of this office in order to establish a temporary location as long as the temporary location is situated where the existing permanent location was located, and notice is given to this office, after-the-fact, of the creation of the temporary location and its municipal address. This will allow us to identify the location for record keeping purposes.
